Subject: conversation with Rob Jackson.

As I explained to you this afternoon in my phone message, Rob Jackson from Duke called me this morning about 10am. He was asking questions about the data from Dimock. He asked about methane and what affect we thought the methane in the groundwater would have. He also asked about what we thought of the isotopic data we collected and if it indicated that Marcellus Shale gas was present. He had a number of other questions related to the affects that drilling might have on the groundwater. Frankly it sounded as though he was looking at a copy of my presentation while he was asking the questions.

In light of the news you shared regarding the LA Times having a copy of the presentation, maybe he was looking a my presentation.
